Telugu Desam Party (TDP) started its maiden political venture in united Andhra Pradesh under the slogan of linguistic identity's pride. Surprisingly, in a record time after its establishment, TDP captured impressive victory and formed a government in 1983. Though TDP based its political slogan and agenda on mastering Telugu people's pride, in reality, it had succinct hidden challenges to face and address. One such prominent challenge was in the Telangana region, now called Telangana State (TS). The present paper highlights, based on what factors, the TDP was politically successful. Furthermore, based on what kind of other factors the TDP faced almost vanquished position in the subsequent times in TS. Methodologically, the paper engages in qualitative and secondary electoral data synthesis. Moreover, the paper constructs about 35 years of TDP's political lineage from 'consolidation to fragmentation' in Telangana.

Two-Day National Seminar on “Party Politics in Telangana State: Issues and Challenges”

Concept Note

Party politics plays a key role in shaping the political landscape of any region. Political parties are the bedrock of any democratic system, playing a crucial role in shaping the governance and policies of a region. In the case of Telangana, a relatively young state in India, political parties have played a predominant role in its formation and subsequent development. The state of Telangana has witnessed a remarkable transformation in its political landscape since its formation in 2014. However, political changes alone are not sufficient to meet the aspirations and needs of its diverse population. In the context of Telangana, a state that has witnessed significant political changes in recent years, it is imperative to examine the issues and challenges faced by political parties and people of the state. Over the past decade, Telangana has undergone a remarkable journey of development and transformation. Since its formation as a separate state, it has made significant strides in various sectors, contributing to the well-being and prosperity of its citizens. The politics of Telangana is deeply influenced by its diverse demographic landscape, with caste and religion playing essential roles in shaping the political discourse. Understanding the intricate interplay between caste and religion in party politics is essential for comprehending the state's political dynamics. It is an ideal and right time to understand the political system and its dynamics in Telangana and to propose reforms and academic output to reshape it.
